Maid of Honor Uniform: Serenity With Sanctity

CHANI FEINGOLD

We all have this dilemma: we want to maintain serenity in our homes. We want to welcome Shabbos and Yom Tov with a calm atmosphere, no clutter on the dining room floor, and a kitchen that does not reflect the chaos that results when several cooks are frenetically preparing multiple five-course seudos.

In order to accomplish this, we often require outside help.

But therein lays the conundrum. While using whatever assistance we can to help us get through the day in an organized up-beat fashion, we don't want to compromise on the sanctity of our homes. This is a real possibility if the employee is not sensitive to the dress code that matters to us. Having domestic help in our homes not attired properly puts the members of our household into a position of nisayon, which is the last thing we want to do.

The Maid of Honor uniform for domestic help is the solution. The uniform is designed in the same style as that worn by the housekeepers who service the rooms in upscale hotels and fits comfortably over clothing for a refined and professional appearance.

Available in three sizes — small, medium and large — the blue uniforms are made of poly-cotton comfortable material and are very easy to care for. With loose three-quarter length sleeves and a pocket-less look, the uniform is the perfect way to ensure the modest appearance of your cleaning help.

Chaya B. from Boro Park, one of many satisfied customers, shared her perspective. She said, "I was grateful when I discovered the Maid of Honor uniform. Before I knew that it was available, the attire of my cleaning help really bothered me, especially in the summer months. I never felt good about it. But what could I do? Now that I have the uniform on hand, I can ask my housekeeper to wear it, by sensitively explaining to her that in our home this is how we dress."

We all desire that our homes be a fortress of kedushah in the midst of a world steeped in negative influences and distractions. We want to create an atmosphere in our homes that is one of refinement and modesty. Having the Maid of Honor uniform on hand for your cleaning help is one vital step that you can take to make this dream a stronger reality.

The Maid of Honor Uniforms are available world-wide. For more information, or to find a seller near you, please call 718-256-0073 in the U.S., or 011-972-44-161-792-6742 in Europe.
